The Pastor Speaks

WHAT'S NEW

Every year scientists give us dozens of new articles which prolong our life and make it more enjoyable to live. In the field of medicine scientists are at work on a nuclear pump which someday may replace the human heart. Also, there is an effort made to use the laser, a beam of concentrated light, to perform delicate surgical operations. For the home, parents will be interested in knowing of a device known as slumber tone. This operates on a penlight battery and emits a soothing hum to lull a little baby to sleep. Also forthcoming in the future is a portable electronic oven which fits on a kitchen counter, will bake a potato in four minutes, and cook a five-pound roast in a half hour. For the busy executive an electronic desk will be offered. This device has a built in radio, tape recorder, TV set, and provisions for hooking up twelve remote cameras that will allow the office manager to keep an eye on what is happening throughout the office. Old products are disappearing from the market. New products are flooding in to take their places.

God is also in the process of turning out new products. He specializes in people rather than in machines, techniques, or foods. In II Corinthians 5: 17 we read, "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

It may be hard to believe, but it is literally true that God can overhaul a person who comes to know Jesus Christ as a personal saviour. That person can be forgiven, changed, transformed and strengthened. A crabby disposition can become a sunny one. A sour nature can become a bright one.

Water Hearing

in Harrisonburg Jan. 8. and in Fairfax Jan. 9.

The river basins included in the Roanoke District are the Chowan, James, New River, Roanoke River and the Yadkin. Also included in this district are the Lynchburg area counties of Amherst, Appomattox, Bedford, Campbell, Pittsylvania and Rockbridge.

According to the rules for general state-wide application, all waters within Virginia must at all times be free from all substances attributable to sewage, industrial wastes in concentrations or combinations which contravene established standards or interfere directly or indirectly with beneficial uses of waters.

Limited zones will be permitted for the mixture of treated sewage, treated industrial wastes and other waste effluents with receiving waters.

However, these zones must generally occupy as small an area and length as possible, and must not prevent the free passage of fish or result in fish mortality.

Stream users and other interested persons wishing to present testimony at the hearings should submit in writing views and other data one week prior to each hearing to the executive secretary of the State Water Control Board.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

TWO QUESTIONS

Lesson for January 4, 1970

Background Scripture: Genesis 17:9-14; Matthew 3; John 1: 19-36; Acts 19:1-7.

Hans Christian Anderson's story of "The Ugly Duckling" is really a parable of life. We see it enacted around us again and again. As children we concerned ourselves very little over the question, "Who am I?" because we were quite sure we knew who we were. But then adolescence steals upon us and all the certainties of the past fly away. Once so sure of our own identity, we now find that we don't really know.

Thinking he was a duckling – and an ugly one, at that – the hero of Anderson's story felt unwanted and rejected by everyone. No matter how hard he tried, he didn't make a very good duck. But then, one day he began to bloom into a beautiful swan and he found out who he really was. Having discovered his true identity, he found also his true vocation in life.

"The Real Me"

Of course, the Danish storyteller was really thinking about people, not ducks. The adolescent years take away our old self images and we enter into young adulthood confused and troubled. Then, as with "The Ugly Duckling," something happens to help us to begin to find out who we are and what we are here for. That is, some of us "find our," while others of us drift along, still searching for the "real me."

This search and discovery for our self-identity is different for each of us. For some of us it comes early and easily. For others, it is a long, hard search. Some do not search at all, content to play roles and wear masks. Yet, there is no more wonderful discovery than for a man to find out who is this "self" that God has created him to become, to find out his mission and niche in life.

One cannot help but suspect that this is the kind of experience that Jesus had when on that day he went to the Jordan River and was baptized by John. Many scholars believe that this is when Jesus truly realized who he was and what he was intended to do. An inner conviction apparently brought him to John to be baptised in the first place. Then, a heavenly voice confirmed it: "This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased." The Baptist also helped to confirm it with his own reaction to Jesus' request for baptism: "I need to be baptised by you, and do you come to me?" and in his later testimony, "Behold, the lamb of God."

The Call

Yes, on that day Jesus received his call to a messianic ministry, but when did that call first begin. This is like asking for the precise moment when a child becomes a youth, or a youth an adult. In reality, the process is long and subtle.

The incident in the temple at age twelve indicates that he already had some sense of call. Throughout his young years, Jesus had become familiar with the messianic prophecies of men like Isaiah. Though long dead and gone from the scene, these men never the less spoke to the heart and mind of this youth concerning his mission.

Jesus found his call in voices from both the past and the present. So, as he called Jesus to his work, he calls us too, using many means to reveal his will to us. He wants us to find out who he created us to be; he wants us to discover our life task, to know the plan he wants us to follow.

Signposts Everywhere

Too long we have assumed that God called only clergymen and missionaries. He calls all men, though many ignore the call. He puts signposts all around us, yet we may pass them by unnoticed. As he sent John the Baptist to Jesus, so he sends people to us to help bear and confirm our call.

Two things we must know as we live this life: Who am I? and What am I here for? Do you know?
